

submitted

Schrekenbach, F., Rothermund, K., & Koranyi, N. Quantity Matters. The Frequency of Deception Influences Automatic Memory Retrieval Effects. MS submitted for publication.

2019

Schrekenbach, F., Rothermund, K., & Koranyi, N. (2019). And remember the truth that once was spoken: Knowledge of having disclosed private information to a stranger is retrieved automatically. Experimental Psychology, 66(1), 12-22. doi:10.1027/1618-3169/a000427

2015

Koranyi, N., Schrekenbach, F., & Rothermund, K. (2015). The implicit cognition of lying: Knowledge about having lied to a question is retrieved automatically. Social Cognition, 33, 67-84. doi:10.1521/soco.2015.33.1.67

Conference contributions

Schrekenbach, F., Koranyi, N., & Rothermund, K. (2016). Telling ordinary lies: The role of distinctiveness in implicit retrieval of lies. Presentation held at the 58th Tagung experimentell arbeitender Psychologen (TeaP), Heidelberg, Germany.

Schrekenbach, F., Koranyi, N., & Rothermund, K. (2015). The implicit cognition of lying. Presentation held at the 57th Tagung experimentell arbeitender Psychologen (TeaP), Hildesheim, Germany.